

Introduction to the LOFAR wiki

This Wiki exists to collect and distribute information of the LOFAR project. It is maintained and used by all LOFAR related personnel.

To navigate this wiki, you can choose one of the sections in the navigation window on the left, or do a 'search' query in the search box.

Please read the LOFAR Wiki guidelines for the purpose and the rules of this Wiki site, before you start editing.

All users are invited (even urged!) to add or update information in this Wiki. If you want to add new information, but have not yet decided or just don't know where it belongs, please enter the information in the waiting room. Your information can always be moved to a more appropriate place later. The most important thing is, is that the information then already has entered this Wiki, which makes it available to other users. All new contributions must be in English.

When you enter the first time, or without logging in, you have only read access to the information in this Wiki. The right to make modifications can be granted when you have registered for an account.

Questions and remarks can be send to the administrator, Arno Schoenmakers (schoenmakers(at)astron(dot)nl).
